Baker asks for support in meeting with Saddam

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State James A. Baker III appealed Wednesday for broad support of the administration's Persian Gulf policy so he can credibly tell Saddam Hussein when they meet: "Get out of Kuwait or risk all."

He said he would not negotiate with Saddam on the visit, which the State Department said had been formally accepted by Baghdad. And he added a new warning: "If force must be used, it will be used suddenly, massively and decisively."

The State Department said Joseph Wilson, the charge d'affaires at the U.S. Embassy in Baghdad, had been informed of Iraq's acceptance of the Baker trip, which President Bush proposed last week.

"When naked aggression takes place, it's not a question of finding face for the aggressor," Bush said during questioning on his South American trip. He added, "When a country is literally raped and pillaged, should the world go out and try to find a way to save face for he who has raped and pillaged that country."

He said he was not optimistic Saddam Hussein would leave Kuwait without a fight.

Baker, laying out a hard U.S. line before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said international sanctions against Iraq have not worked. He added that he was "very pessimistic" they would if given more time, as some congressional Democrats have strongly recommended, and said the threat of attack now holds the best chance for peace.

He said a formal congressional statement of support for using force if necessary "would, I think, significantly reduce the risk of war." But a congressional debate that led to an equivocal message would be counterproductive, he added.

"Congress and the American people must tell Saddam Hussein in unmistakable actions and words: 'Get out of Kuwait now or risk all,'" Baker said.

"Put bluntly, this is the last, best chance for a peaceful solution," Baker said of his upcoming trip to Iraq, on which dates and arrangements were being worked out.

Iraq reportedly offers to put 'all issues' up for negotiation

Associated Press

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein was reportedly offering Wednesday to put "all issues" on the negotiating table, but President Bush said he's not optimistic about prospects for an Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait.

Saddam's latest surprise came as top Bush administration aides warned that Iraq must get out of Kuwait or face the prospect of a devastating military strike.

Israel, too, gave Saddam one of its most forceful warnings to date, saying it would "defend its security, hurt him until he is sorry" if he used current peace moves as a cover for aggression against the Jewish state.

The Cable News Network said Saddam was feeling enormous pressure to withdraw from Kuwait, and quoted a ranking Iraqi source it did not identify as saying, "All issues are on the table, everything."

"I'm not optimistic. I see no evidence Saddam Hussein is willing to comply fully with the U.N. resolutions," Bush told reporters in Argentina.

Those resolutions call for an unconditional withdrawal of Iraqi troops from the emirate, the freeing of foreign hostages and the restoration of the former Kuwaiti government.

The report sent crude oil prices for January delivery down more than $3 a barrel to $27.29 on the New York Mercantile Exchange. That was the lowest level since August, the month Iraq invaded Kuwait.

The Bush administration had offered last week to send Secretary of State James A. Baker III to Baghdad and invited Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz to Washington. Iraq indicated earlier it would accept, and the State Department announcement formalized that.

The department said the dates were being worked out.

The Bush administration has said the talks are to reiterate what U.N. resolutions say, and are not meant to be wide-ranging negotiations.

Iraq says it wants to bring in other Middle East issues, including the Arab-Israeli conflict, but the Bush administration has ruled that out.

Moscow agreed to discuss compensation payments to Iraq. The move came as the Baghdad government prepared to begin freeing more than 3,200 Soviet citizens.

On Wednesday, a group of American women arrived in Baghdad and said they hoped to win the release of their hostage husbands.

"Saddam told us if we come here we will not go back empty-handed," said Dawn Bazner of Detroit after arriving in the Iraqi capital.

In a series of statements Wednesday, Baker, CIA director William Webster and Gen. Colin L. Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, all took a tough position about what might happen if Iraq refuses to give up Kuwait.

U.S., USSR agree to limit arms

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — U.S. and Soviet negotiators have resolved three stumbling blocks as they work to complete a nuclear arms pact for President Bush and Mikhail S. Gorbachev to sign in Moscow early next month, U.S. officials say.

On the two sides, in meetings over the past month, have agreed to limit Soviet Backfire bombers outside the treaty, to allow U.S. nuclear programs with Great Britain to continue and to restrict the launch and payload of the Soviets' modernized, ground-based SS-18 missiles, said an official who spoke on the condition of anonymity.

Plans for Bush's trip to Moscow are on hold while the negotiators try to reach agreement on other technical matters involving inspection of weapons systems and interpretation of missile data.

The White House has said Bush will go to Moscow only if the treaty is ready for signing. The pact will call for scrapping hundreds of warheads under close supervision.

Experts from both sides will meet Friday in Washington to work on the remaining technical matters.

The session is a precursor to the meeting between Secretary of State James A. Baker III and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze in Houston on Monday or Tuesday.

The two are expected to thrash out their remaining differences and set a date for the Moscow summit. Shevardnadze is to then fly to Washington to see Bush on Wednesday.

Recent negotiating sessions produced agreement on three of the outstanding differences holding up the pact, known as START, for Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty, officials said.

A previous disagreement was resolved when the United States agreed that the Soviet Backfire bomber can be counted separately from other strategic weapons under the agreement, officials said.

Argentine president Menem joins Bush in rebuking Iraq

Associated Press

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina — President Bush said Wednesday "I am not optimistic" that Saddam Hussein will withdraw without a fight from Kuwait and vowed that Iraq will not be offered any concessions to end the crisis peacefully.

"I have no feeling whatsoever that Saddam Hussein is willing to do now that which he should have done five months ago," Bush said.

Bush's tough approach was echoed by Argentine President Carlos Menem of Argentina.

"We wholeheartedly condemn what Iraq has done, to invade and occupy a territory which does not belong to it," Menem said at a joint news conference with Bush. "The only way is for Iraq to withdraw without any preconditions."

Bush met with Menem at the Casa Rosada, the president's palace, within eyesight of the army headquarters seized by rebels in a short-lived military uprising Monday.

Bush congratulated Menem for ending the rebellion quickly. "The Argentine people proved again this week that they will not permit any group to return Argentina to the days of violence and dictatorship in a superb show of strength and commitment," Bush said.

Bush's mood turned solemn when he was approached during a diplomatic reception by the Iraqi ambassador to Argentina, Sahib-Hussain Tahir. As required by protocol, Bush quickly shook hands with the diplomat but wore a stern look on his face, in contrast to the warm smile he gave other ambassadors.

Asked by a journalist how the United States would reward Argentina for sending ships to the gulf, Bush replied, "I don't believe Argentina is sending frigates to the gulf to help the United States... They believe as we do, that we must stand up against this brutal aggression."

Nuclear industry seeing red over Homer Simpson's larks

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The nuclear power industry is having a meltdown over "The Simpsons."

The prime-time cartoon show's evil power plant owner with an overbite, dozing employees and a three-eyed fish named Blinky all have contributed to driving industry officials into a critical mass. But more than anything, Homer Simpson has them glowing under the collar.

The U.S. Council for Energy Awareness, an industry information group, told the "Simpsons" producers in a February letter it was horrified to see nuclear plant workers portrayed as "bungling idiots."

Top "idiot" on the council's list was Homer, father of the Simpson family and an employee of the fictitious Springfield nuclear plant.

In various episodes, Homer gives away the plant's blueprints to a foreign exchange student, his boss tries to bribe a plant inspector and three-eyed "Blinky" is found swimming near the plant.

"I am sorry that the Simpsons has offended a lot of people in the energy industry," Executive Producer Sam Simon said in a Feb. 5 letter to Carl Goldstein, a vice president of an energy group.

After they exchanged a few more letters, Simon suggested he and other Fox Broadcasting Co. executives tour a real nuclear power plant.

In April, the group converged on the San Onofre nuclear power plant in San Clemente, Calif.

Simon said the tour "changed a lot of peoples' minds. While some of the shows were in the works before, we really backed off that as a source of comedy. No more three-eyed fish."

The show will continue to jab the industry in its third season, but in a more reasonable way, Simon said.

The press release said members of the Quorums of the Seventy are in charge of administering the affairs of the Church worldwide under the direction of the First Presidency and Quorum of the Twelve Apostles.

According to the press release, "With Church membership now exceeding 7.5 million in more than 125 nations and territories, the Seventy serve as executive directors of departments at Church headquarters and as members of area presidencies responsible for Church administration in 20 geographical areas worldwide."

Students reveal eating habits

By MIDGE HANSEN
Special to the Universe

As BYU students advance in school, they tend to eat less well-balanced meals, spend more money on food, spend less time preparing it and shop more frequently.

This assessment is based on a survey of 80 BYU students — 40 males and 40 females. Twenty of each were freshmen and sophomores and 20 were juniors and seniors or graduate students. The changes in eating behaviors differ from men to women.

The survey asked each student 13 questions about their grocery shopping and meal preparation habits and about the foods they eat regularly.

Although students typically have little time to shop, prepare meals and eat, the students surveyed don't replace mom's cooking with fast food. Instead, they rely overwhelmingly on their own devices. Ninety-three percent of the students said they are more likely to cook for themselves than to eat out.

Fast food may save time and shopping hassles, but the students said they couldn't afford to depend on it.

To save time and money, 22 percent of the students buy groceries with their roommates, explaining that collective shopping is more practical.

It's cheaper to buy food together, they said, even if it's only staple items such as sugar and flour which most people use. Sharing food also saves room in cupboards and refrigerators, students said.

There's no reason to have five ketchup bottles in the refrigerator, one student said.

Some students said they eat better when they shop and cook together because they have more variety of food to choose from.

Students cited problems with this system, such as figuring out the cost of food per person, roommates eating more than their share, trying to please everyone's palate and difficulty in coordinating eating schedules.

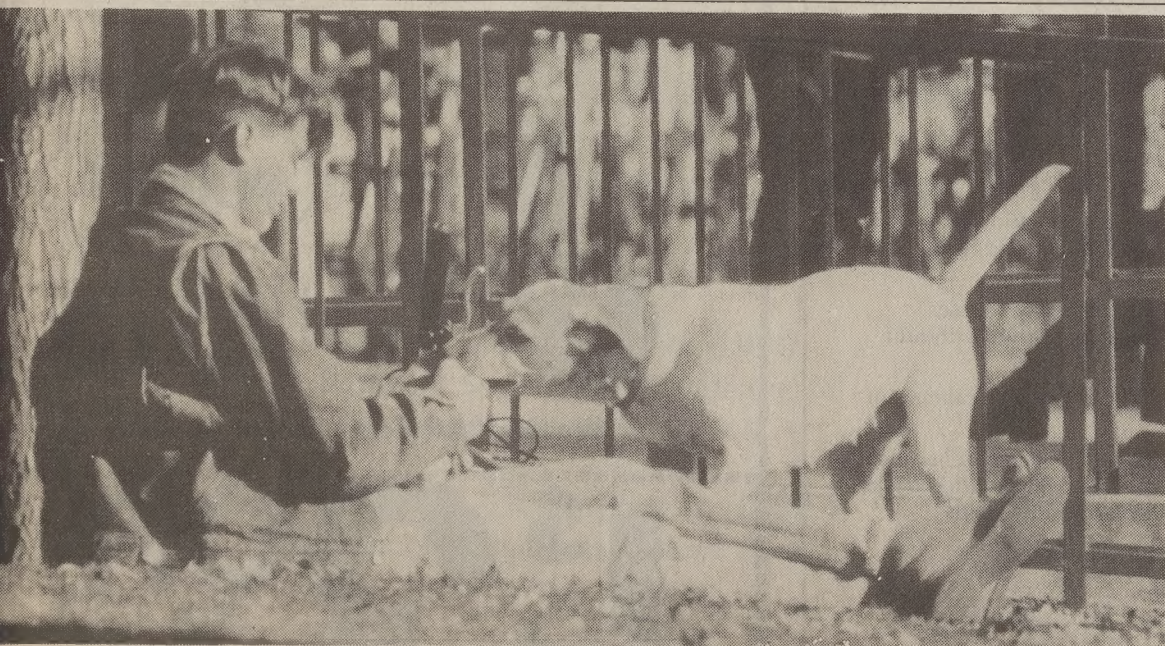

These hassles are significant enough that most of the students who have tried both shopping together and shopping separately prefer to do it separately.

The majority of students — 78 percent — choose to buy food separately.

Interestingly, 40 percent of the men surveyed buy food together, as compared to only 20 percent of the women. Moreover, women who are juniors and seniors buy food together much less often than do women who are freshmen and sophomores.

Just how much money do students spend on food? That also varies from men to women and from freshman and sophomores to juniors and seniors.

CNN decides not to appeal court ruling

MIAMI — CNN has decided to allow court transcripts of its Manuel Noriega prison tapes to be made public without further legal battles, the network and its attorney said Wednesday.

U.S. District Judge William Hoever ruled Tuesday the transcripts could be released Thursday, unless CNN decided to take the case to a higher court. "CNN has decided not to appeal," network attorney Terry Biensstock said, adding that CNN's primary concern had always been to protect its confidential source.

"We don't think the transcripts in and of themselves will jeopardize the source," he said. CNN spokesman Steve Haworth said many of the conversations were in code, and that without supporting documents, they would not be meaningful in any case.

Sanford Bohrer, attorney for four media organizations that asked for the transcripts, applauded CNN's decision.

"I think it was the right decision because Judge Hoever's was the right decision," Bohrer said. "I could never understand how CNN could claim to own conversations that were taped by the U.S. government, of an inmate in a federal prison."

The news organizations seeking the tapes were The Miami Herald, The Associated Press, Post-Newsweek station WPLG-TV of Miami, Gannett Co. Inc. and USA Today, which Gannett owns.

New radar might have prevented crash

ROMULUS, Mich. — Improved ground radar designed to prevent planes from straying onto the wrong runway was on order at Detroit's airport, where two jets crashed on a fog-shrouded runway this week, investigators said Wednesday.

It was not certain the new equipment, which tracks vehicle and aircraft movement on runways, would have prevented the accident Monday that killed eight people, said Fred Farrar, a spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration.

The equipment, ordered before the collision, is to replace existing ground radar at 29 airports, including Detroit, over a three year period beginning in 1991, he said.

Farrar said the new equipment "will eliminate a rather serious flaw with the existing equipment), which cannot see through heavy rain."

Poor economy weakens states' budgets

These are tough times for local and state officials. Confronted by falling revenues and widening budget gaps they are laying off workers, trimming aid to the old and poor and limiting services from garbage collection to snowplowing.

"It takes a lot of courage to be a local elected officials these days," said Douglas Peterson, senior policy analyst for the National League of Cities. "They're going to be making harder and harder choices," he said.

At least 26 states face deficits or budget shortfalls this fiscal year; several others will next year. The prospects get worse as the economy continues to slide.

"We're at the bone already and the marrow is just beginning to leak," said Dave Fuller, a commissioner in Lewis and Clark County, Mont., where any more bad fiscal news will mean cuts in senior citizen programs, snowplowing and road repair.

Oil states such as Alaska and Louisiana see revenues grow along with oil prices. Wyoming is anticipating an unexpected $184 million in increased revenues next year.

When doctors profit, X-ray use increases

BOSTON — Doctors take four times as many X-rays when they own X-ray machines and make money on them, according to a study that provides new evidence of how profits may influence the way physicians practice medicine.

Doctors make a profit on every picture they take with their own equipment. But they earn nothing when they send patients to other specialists for X-rays.

In recent years, many doctors have purchased X-ray and ultrasound machines so they can take diagnostic images in their offices.

While they argue that this is convenient for them and their patients, critics suspect that the chance to make more money is also a big incentive to buy and operate these machines.

The new study provides circumstantial evidence that doctors who own their own imaging machines may overuse the equipment, simply to collect fees, according to the study published in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine. Ethical guidelines agree that doctors' decisions should be based solely on what is best for patients' health, not physician's finances.

Russell Maryland wins Outland Trophy

LOS ANGELES — Miami's Russell Maryland, who delayed a chance to become an instant millionaire in the NFL to stay for his senior season, won the Outland Trophy on Wednesday as the nation's top interior lineman.

The Hurricanes' defensive tackle topped a pair of offensive linemen, guard Joe Garten of Colorado and tackle Stacy Long of Clemson, in the final balloting by members of the Football Writers Association of America. The group does not reveal the voting totals.

The 6-foot-2, 275-pound Maryland had 96 tackles and 10 1/2 quarterback sacks for Miami (9-2) this year. The fourth-ranked Hurricanes will play in the Cotton Bowl against No. 3 Texas on New Year's Day.

Maryland has 270 tackles and 20 1/2 sacks during his four years at Miami.

Although pro scouts projected Maryland as a first-round choice if he entered the draft last spring, he chose to remain at Miami, saying he wanted to help win the national title and try to win the Outland Trophy.

"It's all worth it," Maryland said of the decision to play his final season.

EATING HABITS

Men tend to spend more money on groceries each month than women. The women surveyed spend $30-$50 a month and men spend $70-$90. Also, upperclassmen spend more money than freshmen and sophomores.

The men and women have another aspect of shopping in common. Eighty-two percent of both groups shop between one or more times a week to once every two weeks. Juniors and seniors shop a bit more frequently than freshmen and sophomores.

Men did shop more frequently than women. For instance, 45 percent of the freshmen and sophomore men shop one or more times a week as compared to only 30 percent of the women. Out of the junior and senior men, 60 percent shop weekly as compared to 40 percent of the women.

Cooking time varies greatly. Fifty percent of all the men surveyed spend no more than 15 minutes making their food. Fifty-seven percent of the women spend 15 to 30 minutes preparing theirs.

Students' diets also vary with their year in school. Diets of upperclassmen aren't as well balanced as those of freshmen and sophomores.

Seventy percent of freshmen and sophomores eat a variety of foods during the week, rather than eating the same food several days in a row. Although most juniors and seniors also eat a variety, there is a marked shift to eating the same meal several days in a row.

Juniors and seniors also tend to eat only one thing for dinner rather than making a meal; this was characteristic of freshmen and sophomore men as well. Fifty-five percent of all the men surveyed said they eat one thing rather than a meal for dinner.

The women have different habits; 65 percent of the freshmen and sophomores said they eat meals for dinner. Only 30 percent of the juniors and seniors claimed the same thing.

When asked what foods they buy regularly, the students' answers varied as much as the entrees at a smorgasbord would. With freshman and sophomores, boxed foods (such as macaroni and cheese, Rice-a-Roni, Hamburger Helper), hamburger, soup, pasta and fruit were frequent choices of the men. Women chose boxed foods as well, but added burritos, dairy products, Ramen noodles and vegetables.

Junior and senior men picked burritos, boxed foods, pasta and fruit. But the women chose vegetables, dairy products, cereal, pasta and chicken.

Women shift from buying prepared foods to buying more vegetables and dairy products during junior and senior years. Men shift away from hamburger and soup and buy more burritos, pizza and muffins.

In contrast, the students' favorite homecooked foods were strikingly similar. Mom's lasagna was most popular, garnering 47 percent of the vote. Next was chicken, mentioned by 32 percent; Mexican food by 31 percent and spaghetti by 25 percent.

Bookmobile serves Utah's rural areas

By DARCEY MARSHALL
Universe Staff Writer

If you see a gray, red and white bus driving around the streets of Utah County, don't let it fool you; it's not the Ohio State recruiting team, it's a library on wheels.

The Utah County Bookmobile brings a collection of 40,000 books to communities all across the Utah County area.

"We need as many ways as we can to get people to read. By bringing the books to them it helps those who are unable to get to a city library," said Ed Walker, librarian of the Utah County Bookmobile.

The bookmobile travels everywhere in Utah County from Alpine and West Mountain out to Cedar Valley and the northern parts of Genola, said Walker.

"Our children don't read as much as they used to. We need to get people of all ages excited about reading," he said.

"Often parents don't have the time to drive their children to the libraries, so we go to them. We need to get our children reading more," he said.

At six feet wide and 25 feet long in actual floor space, the bookmobile can hold about 40 people inside.

"It's kind of like a large mobile home with oak shelving," said Walker.

The service caters to approximately 20,650 people a year, according to bookmobile reports.

Bringing its services to seven elementary schools and different neighborhoods around Utah County, it has a yearly circulation of 109,000 books, according to reports.

The bookmobile carries the popular, high-interest books for people of all ages.

There is not a lot of room to carry technical material, said Walker.

The bookmobile services are free to the non-city residents it serves, and they are funded by the county and state library, Abram said.

Mastery of gospel one key for a 'marvelous missionary'

By ELIZABETH ENGSTROM
Universe Staff Writer

Six keys for becoming a "marvelous missionary" were given by Elder Joseph B. Wirthlin of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints Wednesday evening.

"I think there are six m's for becoming a marvelous missionary," Elder Wirthlin said at the Prospective Missionary Conference held at the LDS Missionary Training Center.

The first "m" is to have a mastery of the gospel and a knowledge of its truthfulness, Elder Wirthlin said. "I would hope that you study something about the gospel every day."

To do this, Elder Wirthlin said, one should read the scriptures, receive a patriarchal blessing and study the Missionary Guide.

He said in his father's patriarchal blessing it promised that if his father was worthy, he would, at a specific time in his life, be able call upon the Lord to save his and other people's lives.

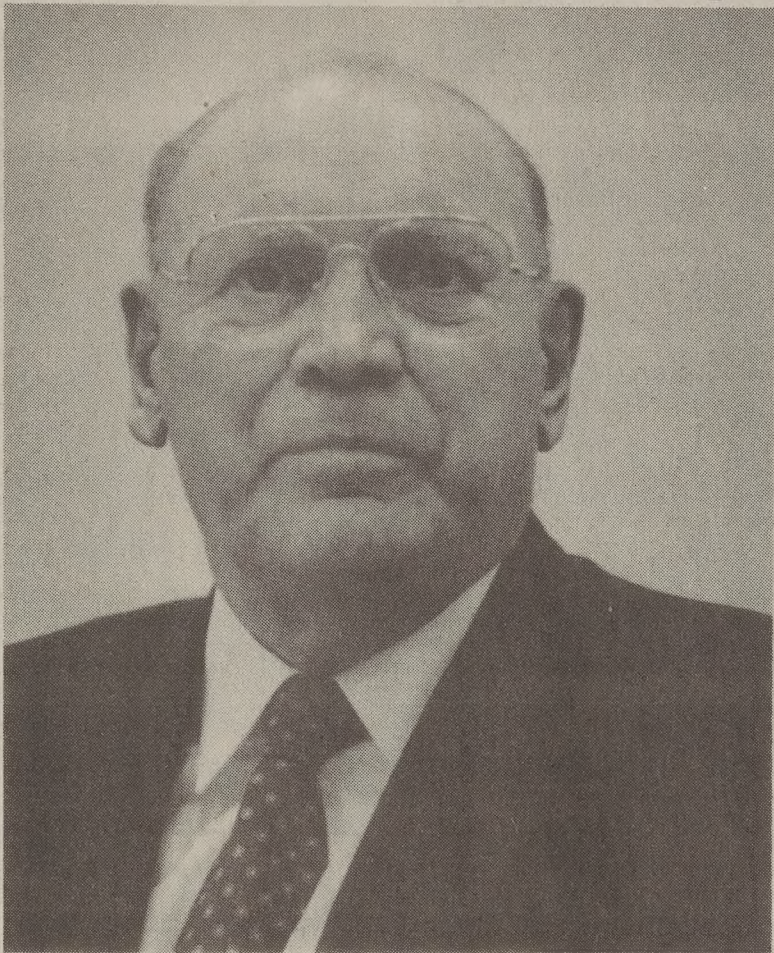

Elder Wirthlin said this promise came true when his father was taking inventory of some cattle in Canada, and he saw a cyclone headed his direction. When the cyclone was about 200 yards away, he remembered his patriarchal blessing and "raised his hand and said, 'Dear Father, please change the direction of that cyclone,'" after which the cyclone turned right.

The next "m" is to "remember memories," Elder Wirthlin said.

He said to remember "your forebears (who) have suffered greatly in the past so that you enjoy the blessings of the gospel today."

Morality is the third "m," Elder Wirthlin said. He quoted President Benson, who said sexual impurity is the greatest sin of this generation.

Morale is another "m" to being a marvelous missionary, Elder Wirthlin said. "We hope that you will keep a high morale for a desire to go on a mission."

Elder Joseph B. Wirthlin spoke Wednesday night at the Prospective Missionary Conference in the Missionary Training Center.

The fifth "m" is momentum — the drive to succeed, Elder Wirthlin said. A great example of momentum can be found in the life of Elder LeGrand Richards, former member of the Quorum of the Twelve, he said.

Once when Elder Richards was riding the Autobahn in Germany with an elder, the missionary was began driving too fast, so Elder Richards asked him to slow down.

After telling him three times, Elder Richards told the missionary to pull over because he wanted to talk with him. He told the elder, "I want you to remember that there are 25,000 missionaries, but only 12 apostles."

The missionary slowed down, Elder Wirthlin said.

The last "m" is miracles, he said. "There are miracles happening in our church," Elder Wirthlin said.

Traction counters ice hazards

By VAUNENE GRANGE
Universe Staff Writer

Ice in the winter can be hazardous — wrenched backs and sprained ankles are common injuries sustained when falling on ice. These injuries can be prevented by wearing shoes with good traction, said the supervisor of nursing services at the Howard S. McDonald Health Center.

The most common injury occurring from slipping on the ice is sprained ankles, said Beth Davis. The number of injuries vary from year to year depending on the severity of the winter.

Walking cautiously and wearing shoes with good traction can prevent an accident on the ice, but there are times when falling is inevitable.

"(Falling on the ice) is just like when you're driving a car and you slide on black ice; no matter how cautious you are, you can't always see the ice before you fall," Davis said.

BYU Grounds Crew takes preventative measures to keep the sidewalks, stairs and parking lots on campus free from possible ice hazards, said Roy Peterman, grounds manager.

Calcium chloride-based salt is sprinkled on the ice patches to create traction, Peterman said.

Allen Brockbank, 26, a senior majoring in illustration from Orem, said he bruised his hip when he fell on the ice.

He said when he cautiously stepped over a small ice mound in a parking lot, he caught his foot in a patch of ice and lost his balance.

Some BYU students have fallen on the ice when they were goofing off with friends.

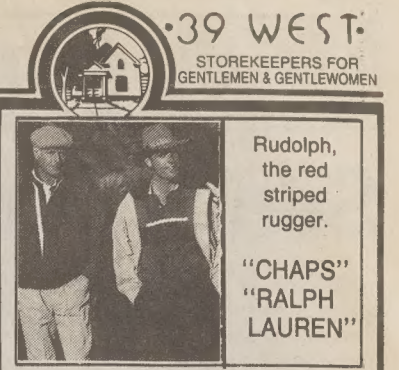

Myra Leavitt, 19, a sophomore majoring in English from Boise, Idaho, said she was purposely sliding on the ice with her friends when she fell and bruised her tailbone and knocked her head on the ground.

"I was more embarrassed than hurt," Leavitt said.

Sometimes the injuries sustained from falling on the ice are more serious than bruises and sprains.

Kathy Grant, a graduate student from Provo, studying instructional science said she broke her arm when she slipped on a patch of ice in her driveway.

Ice is inevitable in winter and to avoid injuries that could put a damper on the season the best precaution to use is good judgment.

BYUSA is hoping to share the Christmas spirit through service projects, events and activities this week.

Christy Smith, an executive director of BYUSA, said one service program is well under way. More than 150 families will be served by the Sub-foranta program.

Many campus wards and family home evening groups are involved in the program and are sponsoring most of the people, she said.

Smith also said BYU professor Frank W. Fox's American Heritage classes are doing a Sub-foranta program and Christmas party. The party will be in the Smith Fieldhouse Dec. 12 from 8 p.m. to 11 p.m.

Donations of food or money will be accepted at the party, Smith said.

The Christmas season is an ideal time to take advantage of opportunities to help others. Smith said there are families in Utah Valley who need service and help of various types, and students should look for them.

One of the most significant activities is Preefest, which is a first-time program at BYU, said Becky Taylor, BYUSA administrative director and program coordinator.

On-campus clubs, family home evening groups, ward groups and other miscellaneous student groups have donated trees to be shown in the ELWC West Patio, she said.

The trees will be displayed today and Friday from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m.

After being displayed, the trees will be taken down and given to some needy families in the area, Taylor said.

Patty Hawkins, BYUSA executive director and director of the "Y-Christmas" series of events, said activities such as face-painting and cookie decorating, as well as performances by choirs and a visit from Santa Claus will take place today.

Students will also be able to decorate cards to go to rest homes in the area.

Friday's activities will include a concert by Steven James, which will cost $2 admission. A dance will follow the concert. The James Stewart movie "It's a Wonderful Life" will be shown that evening.

Games and refreshments will also be a part of the evening's activities, Hawkins said.

BYUSA officers also feel good about the general response to Project Uplift, a program which has sent approximately 1,500 Christmas packages to servicemen who are members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

LDS Church 'flourishing' in Korea

By KATHRYN E. FERREL
Universe Staff Writer

Korea is a land of miracles where the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is flourishing, said Elder Douglas H. Smith and Sister Barbara Smith in an address at the David L. Kennedy Center for International Studies Wednesday evening.

Elder Smith, former Asian Area president of the LDS Church, said Korea has over 56,000 members, 74 LDS Church-owned meeting houses, one temple, four missions, 250 local missionaries, 480 North American missionaries and an estimated 2,800 baptisms in 1990.

"Next to the Bible, The Book of Mormon is the bestseller in Korea," Elder Smith said. Korea ranked fourth worldwide in the 1989 distribution of The Book of Mormon, distributing more than 175,000 copies. He said as of Tuesday, the Church predicts distribution of The Book of Mormon in Korea for 1990 will exceed 200,000.

Sister Smith, former general Relief Society president, said she has learned that Koreans are very responsive. "So many of them are going to the temple," she said.

Leaders who meet the needs of the people, help the members understand the importance of going to the temple and encourage others to set examples of temple attendance are greatly appreciated, Sister Smith said.

"There has to be that kind of direction if we're ever going to accomplish the work that has to be done," she said.

Elder Smith said, "Each convert should have the goal of receiving the highest temple ordinances." Many members who are not strong in the Church do not have this goal, he said.

All people need help understanding who they are and why they're here and what difference they can make in the Church, Sister Smith said.

Elder Smith said the greatest challenge in the 1990s is to bring the blessings of home, family and eternal marriage to a larger number of members of the Church.

OPINION

Send food to Russia

The Nov. 30 issue of "This Week in Germany" reported the beginning of the largest food aid project in postwar German history. "Speaking in Bundestag on Nov. 22, Chancellor Helmut Kohl said that he and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev had agreed while at the CASE conference in Paris on the private aid drive. Gorbachev said that he would remove bureaucratic obstacles so that the aid actually reaches the people for whom it is intended. As of Nov. 29, the drive had led to pledges of millions of marks. A 'Help Russia' drive of the Second German Television, broadcast from Leningrad, brought donations of more than (3.81 million marks). Hamburg inhabitants have sent 100,000 food packages to their sister city Leningrad, and a call for contributions from Stern magazine resulted in pledges of (2.5 million marks). DARE plans to contribute 80,000 packages.

UNIVERSE OPINION

Policy Advisor Horst Teltschik ... also reported that Kohl had proposed that (500 million marks) worth of food, currently stored in Berlin, be shipped to the Soviet Union. Teltschik said that if the Bundestag budget committee approved Kohl's proposal, direct shipment could begin early next week.

"The foodstuffs stored in Berlin constitute an 'iron reserve' for possible food shortages in times of crisis."

We, along with Alan Keele, a BYU professor of German, applaud their actions. Keele wrote, in an unpublished letter to the editor, "Both the state of Germany and German private citizens are responding in a remarkably enlightened and humane manner to the critical needs of the Soviet Union by shipping hundreds of tons of food, and pledging further millions of marks in order to help the cause of peace and stability in Europe and in the world. The most moving response came during a recent telecast on German television from Leningrad, a city German troops surrounded and literally starved for 1,000 days during World War II, but whose population will not starve this winter because of the German initiatives.

"I am saddened to read also in the German press that the American State Department has attempted to discourage these initiatives. I am saddened to see that America has been pouring its substance into a terribly ill-advised offensive build-up in the Persian Gulf, thereby heightening world tensions and destabilizing the world rather than attempting to stabilize it by helping the Soviets and Eastern Europeans (and Africans, Latin Americans, Asians ...) to build peaceful, productive, democratic societies.

"I call upon Americans, both in official and private capacities, to recognize the usefulness and rightness of the German example and to respond in kind. With nearly three times the population of Germany, we need to contribute at least proportionately to help Soviet citizens understand we think they are on the proper course, to help them avoid the radical and dangerous expedients people take only when they are desperate. (Witness the economic distress in Germany that allowed a Hitler to come to power.)

"I call on the students, faculty and staff of BYU to undertake similar initiatives at BYU and to also take the idea home with them to the rest of the nation (and to other nations) during the Christmas season. Let's send food to the Soviet people ourselves and urge our governmental representatives to develop a more enlightened national policy to do the same."

This editorial is the opinion of The Daily Universe Editorial Board, which comprises the associate publisher, editor, opinion page editor, a teacher of opinion writing and a student staff member. ## Ombudsman's Office warns: Beware of credit card fraud

"Students should refrain from giving out credit card numbers over the phone," said BYU Ombudsman Darin Delange. Delange explained that many BYU students have fallen victim to credit card scandals. The Ombudsman's Office is now working on three such cases.

In most instances, the student receives a call from a "credit card protection agency" offering insurance for lost or stolen credit cards. The cost of the service ranges anywhere from $100 to $300 depending on the company. In each case, the prospective client is informed that along with the insurance, he will receive a "major prize" like plane tickets, a home stereo system or even cash. Unfortunately, such offers are rarely legitimate.

One case now under investigation illustrates this type of scandal. A sophomore at BYU received a call telling him he had already won one of four prizes, including a 1990 Chrysler Lebaron, a Hawaiian holiday for four, $1,500 or a Sony home entertainment system.

The caller, representing Global Lifestyles Inc., said the student would also receive a bonus prize with his purchase of the credit card protection.

The student agreed to buy the insurance and gave the telemarketer all of his credit card account numbers including his Visa card number to which the $279 insurance was subsequently charged. Weeks passed and no prize arrived. The student grew suspicious and called the "customer service number" only to find it had been disconnected.

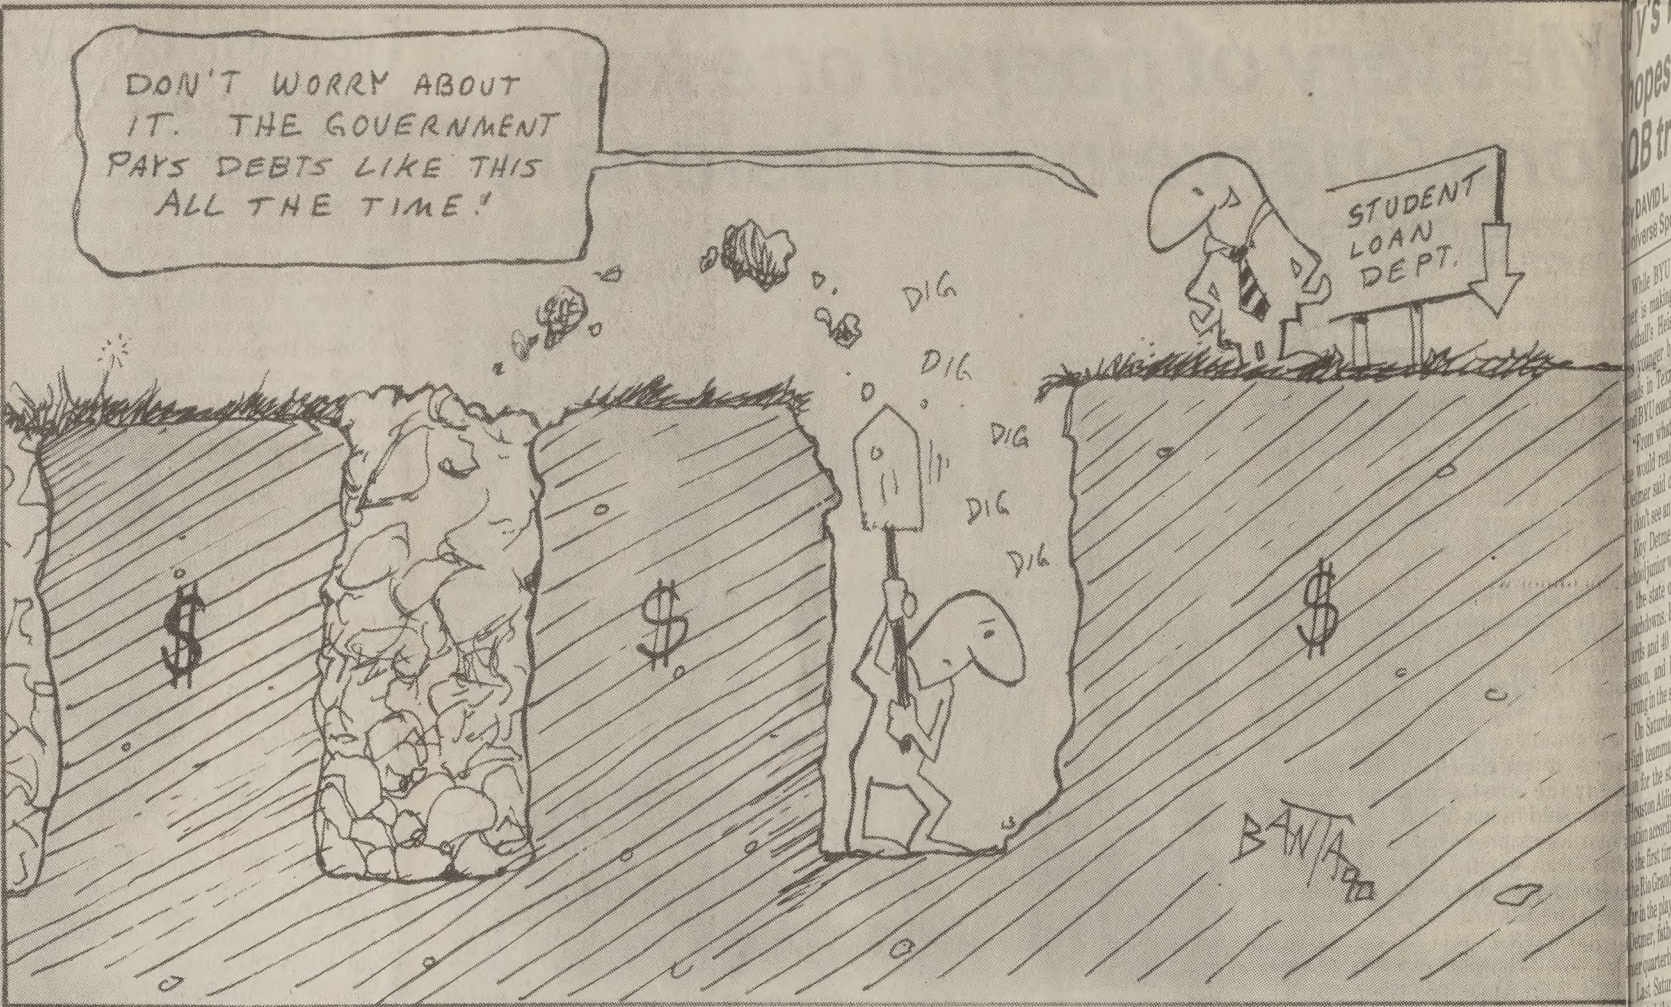

Further research by the Ombudsman's Office showed that this student was not the only one to be duped by Global Lifestyles Inc.

The Better Business Bureau of Houston reports many complaints of fraud and unauthorized credit card charges were filed against Global Lifestyles Inc.

"Sadly enough, there's not a whole lot we can do to help those who have already been deceived," Delange said. "By the time the student realizes he's fallen prey to a scam, the business has folded up its tents and are headed elsewhere."

Delange said the Ombudsman's Office strongly discourages anyone from giving credit card numbers over the phone before consulting the Better Business Bureau.

Educate yourself

To the Editor:

As one of the "uneducated loudmouths" who voiced my "ignorant opinion" to the "embarrassment of my peers" I thought I might also risk responding to a letter in the Dec. 3 Daily Universe. A number of "facts" raised in the letter need clarification but I will only address one point.

Concerning the current gulf crisis, the letter states, "This conflict is not about oil. It is about human lives. If these loudmouths (critics of U.S. policy) would just take a few opportunities to educate themselves ..." At the risk of again embarrassing the gentle author of this profound statement, I pose a simple question: If the United States is intent on liberating Kuwait for the glorious cause of liberty (not for oil), then why aren't we in Liberia, Palestine, Cambodia, Burundi, Afghanistan, Lebanon, Mozambique or Chad?

Educate yourself.

Strangers

To the Editor:

We congratulate the Honors Student Council for its efforts to promote a more personal student experience at BYU. Their retreat to Aspen Grove, as described in the Nov. 19 Daily Universe sounds like a very effective way to bring students and professors together in a more personal atmosphere. The Student-Alumni Association works through each and every college council to bring students and teachers together in an informal dinner setting.

For the past eight years, the Student-Alumni Association has sponsored a program called Dinner for 12 Strangers. This program was created to allow students, faculty and alumni an opportunity to meet in a social atmosphere away from the pressures and hierarchy of the university setting. Dinners are held in the homes of local alumni and/or faculty with students invited for an evening of conversation and diversion. The dinners are organized by the departmental clubs throughout campus. The Student-Alumni Association acts as a warehouse of ideas and resources.

BYU is a very big place, and getting lost in the crowd is too easy. A quality and memorable education comes from personal interaction with others, especially professors. Dinner for 12 Strangers can be a very effective way to facilitate that relationship.

For those who are interested in learning more and/or participating in a Dinner for 12 Strangers, please contact Todd Irwin, vice president of the Student-Alumni Association at 378-2164 or 374-9848. He has information about the dinners scheduled in the various departments on campus.

Sleepy athletes

To the Editor:

Since the Lord says he will have a "humble people," our football performance in Hawaii is actually an eternal blessing. Unfortunately, many of my colleagues fell asleep in the middle of this pride-stripping event.

Though football may not be as nationally significant as the etymology of the word freshman or the moral worthiness of sockless cyclists on campus, I find myself wrestling with a simple question: How does Hawaii conveniently manage to schedule its home matchups with BYU as evening games?

If it is tough for faithful fans in Provo to remain mentally alert throughout a midnight massacre, it must certainly be difficult for the players. I am not groping for excuses about the "Saturday/Sunday" game since I was pleasantly shocked that Hawaii's usually absent offense chose to appear for its BYU victory; instead, I question the system.

I do not try to comprehend the divine power that governs the procedure for team scheduling, but it seems basic common sense should govern the selection of game time.

Maybe it's mere coincidence that BYU was the only football team this year to play an evening game in Hawaii. Maybe it is only an accidental echo of last year's schedule. If so, maybe BYU should allow Hawaii to be a "humble people" by scheduling next year's home game with Hawaii at 8 a.m. MST.

Diversity of thought

To the Editor:

In reporting on the recent reaccreditation of the J. Reuben Clark Law School, Daily Universe reporter Amber Cothran took another opportunity to bring up the issue of "diversity," based on "color and sex." Cothran noted the issue of diversity, as relating specifically to the law school, was "questioned." One first-year law student was quoted as saying he was "pleasantly surprised with the diversity of thought that exists (at the law school)."

So what is the issue with diversity? The term obviously means different things to different people. Are we seeking diversity of "color and sex," diversity in "thought," or both? Are these two types of diversity inseparable?

I recently came across a Newsweek article written by a third-year law student at Harvard University on the subject of fraudulent diversity. In short, the writer is troubled that the term "diversity" is being used to fulfill the objective of obtaining quotas. He said the word diversity is being used "euphemistically" to mean "being black, or belonging to some other racial minority; being female; being either openly gay or lesbian, and recently, being disabled." He stresses that the assumption that "diverse ideas" are more likely to come from these groups is "prejudiced and implausible."

While obtaining physical "diversity" at BYU is a worthwhile goal, a great deal of "diversity of thought" already exists here. I thank Cothran for bringing that point to the attention of the student body.

Student safety

To the Editor:

This is in response to the recently released BYU crime statistics. I do feel safe here at BYU, and I feel why. When I first transferred here from another university, I called the university Police for a ride home because I was studying late in the Harold Lee Library. They told me, "We do provide that service for students. Don't you have a roommate who can take you home?" I told the secret no, I had just moved here and I didn't know anyone yet. Since I only lived the bottom of the hill, could she please arrange for a ride? I would be willing to wait for an hour or so until an officer was not so busy. No, sorry, I was to take you home? I told the secret of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints regard to male-male-female transportation, so maybe we should range something else.

I admit it wasn't a good idea to out alone when it was dark, but I had a right to be safe; and with current policies and lighting on campus, don't feel safe here at all. I felt safe where the crime rate was much higher but the administration cared and something about it. I am not trying to be too critical; I just have to watch for myself, and it would be nice to have others watching, too.

SOAPBOX SUMMARY

WORKING CLASS — "We disagree with the military offensive which requires working class people to go to Kuwait to protect the interests of oil corporations. How many American lives should we give so rich Kuwaitis can go to Atlantic city and spend their money?" Another speaker said, "The politics of class conflict really irk me. We have to keep in mind that, unlike Vietnam, every soldier in our armed forces today is a volunteer. These people entered into a contract to defend freedom because that was their choice, not because they were forced to do so by big oil corporations or the interests of the rich. We trivialize their dedication to serve and defend our country when we portray them as nothing more than victims of class warfare and economic exploitation. I think they deserve our respect, not our pity."

IRONY OF WAR — "I think it's really ironic that, as we sit here with Christmas music playing in the background, that this is certainly not a peaceful season." SADDAM HUSSEIN — "Saddam Hussein is very definitely a threat. He is a maniac who obviously doesn't care about people. He's got a huge army and he's working on developing nuclear capabilities. We're going to have to deal with him sooner or later, and think now is better than later."

FOREIGN INVOLVEMENT — "I don't think that we should worry about the people in other countries. We should worry first about the people in our own country—about all our domestic problems." Another speaker said, "I think it's ignorant to think that our Western ideas are the only ones worth fighting for. We should be willing to help countries with ideas different than ours. Even if they're different, they still have the right to be free."

HELPING KUWAIT — "The war isn't about oil. Kuwait was a country and it was invaded. Someone has to stick up for Kuwait and I'm glad they're going to try to stick up for them." Another speaker said, "There would have been a good argument back in Vietnam, when we were fighting for democracy, but Kuwait is not democracy. It is country where, if you were a woman, you couldn't drive. Kuwait is country where two-thirds (its inhabitants) aren't even considered citizens."

CORPORATE PRESSURES — "The only reason the United States wants to be in the Persian Gulf is because it's in the interests of the large corporations. We're not there for moral reasons. The fact that President Bush has already changed the reasons for our being there three times shows that the real reason aren't moral."

Ty's brother hopes to follow QB tradition

By DAVID L. HANCOCK
Universe Sports Writer

While BYU quarterback Ty Detmer is making headlines as college football's Heisman Trophy winner, his younger brother Koy is turning heads in Texas high school football and BYU coaches are very interested. "From what I've heard from Koy, he would really like to come here," Detmer said of his younger brother. "I don't see any other place for him." Koy Detmer is a 17-year-old high school junior who is the leading passer in the state of Texas for yards and touchdowns. He has thrown for 3,319 yards and 40 touchdowns so far this season, and his team is still going strong in the state playoffs.

On Saturday, Koy and his Mission high teammates will travel to Houston for the state semi-finals to meet Houston Aldine, the No. 1 team in the nation according to USA Today. "This is the first time in history a team from the Rio Grande Valley has made it this far in the playoffs," said Coach Sonny Detmer, father and coach of the Detmer quarterbacks.

Last Saturday, just after Ty was awarded the Heisman Trophy, Koy led his team to a 59-17 win in the state quarter-finals by throwing for 390 yards and three touchdowns. Passing for 300 yards in a game must be something Detmer quarterbacks are born with.

"We're almost exactly the same in numbers and everything," said Koy, who at six feet and 145 pounds is physically almost a mirror image of Ty when he was in high school.

One advantage the younger Detmer may have is his knowledge of the game. According to Ty, Koy is smarter now than I was when I was his age. This year has really convinced me that he is a great quarterback.

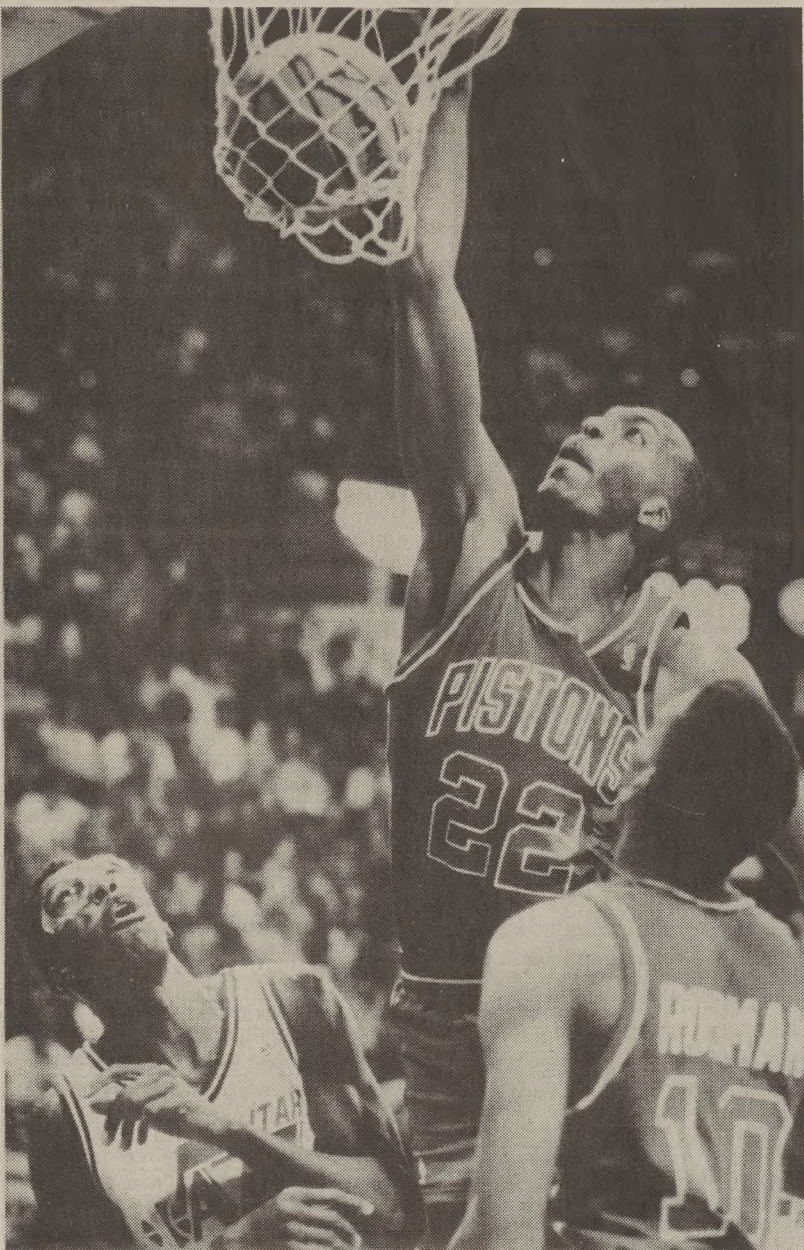

As the coach of two of the best high school quarterbacks Texas has ever known, Sonny said Ty and Koy are similar in many ways. "They put up the same big numbers and they both know how to make things happen, but they are still team players," Detmer said. "Both of them have always had very successful teams."

During his press conference this week, the Heisman winner said he and Koy are alike in another way, they are both shy in front of the press, though Ty seems to be getting used to it. Referring to an interview CBS did with Koy, Ty said "he's exactly the same as I am, I was surprised he said anything on the interview."

BYU coach Claude Bassett calls the younger Detmer each Thursday before his games to make sure he is not thinking too seriously about other schools, and to remind him that BYU would love to have another quarterback named Detmer.

BYU's present quarterback said there are many factors to be considered before Koy will commit to play for the Cougars, but if everything goes well this next year, he may commit early. "For him to come up here and have a shot at playing would be a great experience for him."

Although the high school star has not made the final decision, Ty said "it wouldn't take too much convincing to get him to come here."

Jazz defeat Detroit

By ROD CORTEZ
Universe Sports Writer

The Utah Jazz defeated the defending world champion Detroit Pistons 106-85 before a sell-out crowd at the Salt Palace.

"We played good solid defense tonight, and you need that to win tough ballgames at home," said Jazz forward Karl Malone. The Jazz were led by both Karl and Jeff Malone with 23 and 27 points respectively.

"The addition of Jeff Malone makes the Jazz a much stronger team than last year. He was the difference tonight," said Piston Head Coach Chuck Daley.

"We were very happy with the way we played in the second half tonight," said veteran guard Jeff Malone. "I hit the tough shots and missed the easy ones," said Malone, a former player for the Washington Bullets.

The Jazz out played the Pistons 33-15 in the fourth quarter, and at one point, outscored the world champions 27-6. Detroit guard Isiah Thomas said, "We had to play most of the game with our second unit because of foul trouble... that hurt us tonight."

Daley credited the tough defense of the Jazz as the decisive factor in the game. "They turned up the defense, and we couldn't get a good shot. That put us out of the basketball game. When you play a great team on the road you're going to have a hard time winning," Daley said.

The Jazz shot 52 percent from the field compared to Detroit's 46 percent. The Jazz also hit 73 percent of their free-throws to the Piston's 71 percent.

Jazz guard John Stockton had four steals and 18 assists which was two assists better than the whole Pistons team.

The Jazz will take on Magic Johnson and the Los Angeles Lakers on Friday. Jazz guard Jeff Malone expects the Lakers to run against them. "We will have to be ready for the Lakers because they are always very tough against us. I have seen them play this season, and it won't be easy," said Malone.

Wednesday's win improves the Jazz record to 10-7 while the Pistons drop to 13-5 for the season.

Women's team 18th in college tennis poll

By PAUL BARTMESS
Universe Sports Writer

The nationally ranked BYU women's tennis team is looking forward to a challenging schedule this year. The 18th ranked Cougars have scheduled dual meets with 19 of the top 25 teams in the country this season.

"We're looking forward to playing the best because we feel we're one of the best teams in the country," said Coach Keith Wilson. "We think we can compete with any team in the nation."

The majority of BYU's team is freshmen and sophomores making experience a major concern for Wilson.

"Experience should be a problem toward the beginning of the season but as the year goes on we should get better and better," said Wilson. "Once the experience comes we should be a very tough team to beat."

The team could be better named the international squad. Three of the teams top performers are from foreign countries. Ivica Koljanin (Yugoslavia), Lesley Baubour (Zimbabwe) and Monica Koblikova (Czechoslovakia) give the team an international flavor.

I really enjoy playing here in America because there is so much competition," said Koljanin. "Every time you go out on the court you know that you are going to be challenged because there is so much talent at the college level."

The season begins the third week in January and the team is already preparing for tough battles ahead.

"We hope to peak for the NCAA championships in the spring so we don't have any fall meets," said Wilson. "We're preparing now to compete hard and show the rest of the country that our girls are the team to beat."

War in gulf could mean political suicide for Bush

By MICHAEL HAMMER
Senior Reporter

If President Bush takes the country into war now it could very well be political suicide, said the director of the David M. Kennedy Center for International Studies.

"I don't think the president can take this country into war when it is divided," Ray Hillam said. "If Saddam Hussein doesn't do something to unify us, it will be very difficult for Bush to take us to war."

If an incident were to occur, "particularly a dramatic incident that endangered the lives of Americans, that would unify us," and Bush could then take us to war, Hillam said.

If the war is short, then it does not matter so much that the nation is divided, Hillam said. But we don't have any assurance that it would be short. A long war would necessitate a draft, which could cause protests similar to those during the Vietnam era.

"We have a divided country. Until that division can be overcome, I don't see Bush leading us to war," Hillam said.

Valerie Hudson, an assistant professor of political science at BYU, said something will happen between now and January that will unite the nation.

"Even though we have no stomach for war, we also have no stomach for maintaining an army in Saudi Arabia for a year," Hudson said.

"There is a 60-40 chance there will be a war in January," she said.

To prevent war "I think we should have negotiations, not just edicts," Hillam said. "We should exhaust all means possible to avoid war."

Bush has done a masterful job in constructing his coalition, Hillam said, but it seems Americans have a war without sufficient cause.

This means that national security or vital interests are not at risk. Sufficient cause needs to be something better than oil, or defending another country's interests.

Hillam said he is worried about Bush thinking the decision to go to war is all his. That Congress wants a hand is more evidence of the division of the country.

But Hudson said, "Congress will not invoke the War Powers Act because then it would be Congress' war and not Bush's war."

Congress would rather take potshots at the president over his policies than explain all the funerals to its constituents, Hudson said.

The president is obviously preparing for war, Hudson said. The legislative branch should have a voice, but "You won't see War Powers Act invoked."

Congressional budget experts expect $337 billion deficit in 1991

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Congressional budget experts believe that next year's budget deficit will hit at least a record $337 billion despite the giant deficit-reduction law enacted last month, according to documents obtained Wednesday by The Associated Press.

That deficit projection will probably grow even worse because of the weakening economy, the non-partisan Congressional Budget Office said in a report prepared for delivery Thursday to the House Budget Committee.

Bush administration officials are now drafting a budget proposal for the next fiscal year, the 1992 fiscal year beginning Oct. 1. But they are not expected to release their figures until February.

A deficit of $337 billion would be well above the ceiling required by the new deficit-reduction law.

The calculations by the Congressional Budget Office are the first that show how the five-year, $496 billion deficit-cutting law will affect the federal budget over the next several years.

CBO's numbers are advisory and are not officially used to determine how high the deficit is. That task falls to the White House's Office of Management and Budget. Nonetheless, the CBO figures are widely respected on Capitol Hill.

The CBO report was based on economic conditions that existed in October. The study's authors cautioned that since then, oil prices have remained high, the real estate market has been weak, and many banks and corporations have had financial problems.

"Unless these factors are offset by other developments, a more pessimistic economic outlook will worsen the budget projections," the report said.

The report projects a $320 billion deficit for the current fiscal year, which runs through next Sept. 30. That would be $7 billion below the ceiling set by the new deficit-reduction law for this year. If accurate, that would be the first time since deficit targets were imposed in 1986 that the actual budget gap was less than the maximum deficit set by law.

But problems would begin again next year, when the new law requires a budget gap of no more than $317 billion, the report said. The shortfall that year will exceed the target by at least $20 billion, it said.

That might not be a serious problem because new budget procedures allow the administration to increase the deficit targets to reflect a weakening economy.

Many of the budget office's expectations for economic performance have deteriorated since it released its last projections last summer.

CBO now expects the economy to grow at a weak 0.6 percent in 1991, down from its 2.5 percent estimate in July. The Bush administration has said it expects economic growth at around 0.8 percent.

The budget office also projects that inflation will be 5.3 percent in 1991, 1.1 percent higher than it expected in July. And it expects unemployment to be 6.4 percent in 1991, compared with a 5.4 percent projection made during the summer.

Pass the turkey, Boris; how about a fruitcake?

Associated Press

BERLIN — Forget the bitter past. Remember the less fortunate. Have a heart. Invite a Red Army soldier home for the holidays.

A German friendship society is asking east Germans to make life a little easier for the Soviet force that occupied their former nation for 40 years.

The message? Set an extra place at the table this Christmas. Pour another glass of champagne on New Year's Eve. Call the Soviet command and ask them to send over a soldier.

"The inclination to help is very strong," Horst Gruetzke, spokesman for the Berlin-based German Society, said Wednesday.

The society's nationwide appeal is the latest demonstration of gratitude to the Soviet Union for giving up its claim to East Germany and allowing German unification.

It comes amid a large-scale and remarkably popular effort by German relief groups, labor unions and companies to ship hundreds of tons of food and other necessities to ease the Soviet Union's chaotic food situation.

"This appeal is in keeping with the relief effort," said Gruetzke. "We want to thank the Soviets for our sovereignty."

The German Society was formed in January with the goal of improving relations between East and West Germany. Its members include former Chancellor Willy Brandt.

The government of eastern Brandenburg state said Tuesday it would try to send holiday food packages to Soviets on their bases and also sponsor an invite-a-soldier program.

Once feared and reviled, the Soviet army is drawing mostly pity these days as it prepares to pack up and leave what used to be East Germany.

Its mystique as a formidable fighting force has been replaced by images of low-paid, unskilled young men heading back to a homeland struggling with shortages and social turmoil.

A news photographer recently caught two soldiers poking through an eastern German garbage dump for something valuable to salvage.

Reinhart Luschert, spokesman for the eastern German forces based in Strausberg, said he welcomed efforts by Germans to share holiday dinners with Soviet soldiers.

"We are glad about such activities because we know the problems of the Soviet soldiers," he said.

There have been widespread reports of desertions and suicides by Soviet soldiers and assaults upon them by eastern Germans.

Lt. Gen. Michael Kalinin, commander of Soviet forces in eastern Germany, told a news conference in Potsdam on Wednesday that about 80 Soviet soldiers have deserted this year, and that 24 of them fled to the West.

Gas prices raise costs of busing

By ELIZABETH PEDRO
Universe Staff Writer

The continuing escalation in the cost of gasoline is putting a heavy burden on school districts, according to a survey by the State Office of Education.

Kelvin C. Clayton, transportation specialist for Utah, said each 1-cent hike in gas prices costs the state $31,690.

Since July, the state's 40 school districts have seen fuel costs increase $1.4 million, Clayton said.

Utah school buses travel a total of 21.2 million miles a year, transporting 35 percent of the state's public school students.

The state's 40 school districts will work with the Utah Legislature next year to address the rapid increase, so services to children will not have to be cut, Clayton said.

Some districts are considering purchasing diesel-powered buses to save money. About 45 percent of the state's school buses now use diesel fuel, he said.

Diesel fuel provides twice the mileage of regular unleaded gasoline. Many buses will be replaced with diesel-driven buses as soon as the districts can afford the change, said Clayton.

Rising gasoline prices are forcing school districts to re-examine their transportation systems.

asking school drivers across the state to help reduce fuel consumption. One of the suggestions is to reduce engine idling time and to park buses at school to eliminate retracing the route.

Other suggestions include purchasing larger buses to permit consolidation of routes and asking students to walk longer distances to school.
